Pending the action of the Secretary on the recommendation his daughter had been sworn in on March 11 as witness' secretary, under a custom of the office. Approval of the recommendations of the commissioner were almost uniform, and when there was delay in action persons were sometimes sworn in pending approval of the recommendation.

His daughter had not resigned or been dropped from the census rolls, and would return to duty in that office on Monday.

Mr. Enloe asked the commissioner if his son when acting as appointment clerk had not

He replied that his son was a notary before He replied that his son was a notary before he (the son) went into office and charged a fee. The matter was not stopped by the Secretary of the Interior. There had been complaint because the chief clerk of the War Department had charged such a fee for swearing in a great number of persons. Mr. Enloe asked the commissioner how much time he had been absent from his officesince his appointment as commissioner. Mr. Raum said he did not know. Mr. Enloe asked if it were a year. He had observed the civil service law with the same fidelity that he observed other statutes. Never made a removal except for CATEVO OF PEWOTAT.

The causes of removal were various. He did not think the law defined these causes. Incompetency and drunkenness were causes. Asked for other causes, he said:

Had never removed any person because of difference in politics. A very few persons had been removed for offensive partisanship. Had never said he removed a man because he was a democrat.

Mr. Enloe asked about a female clerk who was said to have offered $50 to his son, Green B. Raum, jr., soon after being reinstated. The commissioner said his son had called his attention to the matter immediately afterward. The clerk said she did it out of gratitude and did not intend anything corrupt. Upon this

After going over the history of the circumstances connected with the demand for the resignation of Green B. Raum, jr., Mr. Enloe resignation of Green B. Raum, jr., Mr. Enloe asked if witness, when he returned to Washington, had seen the President in regard to it. The commissioner said he would like to consult his counsel, Mr. Payson, as to whether it was proper for him to repeat a conversation with the President before responding. Mr. Payson saw nothing improper in it, and the commissioner said that his son had an application pending before the Interior Department to be admitted to the bar of the department. He spoke of this to the President and took occasion to speak of the services his son had rendered in the pension office, saying he had discharged his duties with energy and intelligence. Witness told the President that he was satisfied the charge that his son had made the office a "Too much is expected of our navy. It is almost ludicrous to think of holding the navy responsible for 4,000 miles of frontier, occupied by 10,600,000 of people, the possessors of one-twelfth of the country's wealth. The most a navy can do is to protect the commerce of a country and cope with foreign fleets. Fortifications will some day receive from the American people the consideration such defenses deserve; let us trust they may never be needed before we have them."

Witness also spoke to the President of the charge that his son had attempted to defraud the government of $72 which came into his hands; told the President the circumstances and said that in his opinion no greater outrage had ever been perpetrated than to charge his son with undertaking to withhold that money from the government. Witness then spoke of his son's desire to practice before the Interior Department. Did not speak with reference to reinstating his son in office and did not desire

An interference such as that described with a committee of the House acting in a judicial capacity is said by members to be esculated to excite considerable feeling, and expressions of disapproval and surprise are very common.

Some of the republicans are considering a proposition to introduce a resolution in the House for an investigation, and it is not unlikely, if the matter comes before the House in this way, that Mr. Hill will receive a severe raking over the coals. The general feeling is that the disclosure

EXECUTIVE SESSION BUSINESS.

The Senate spent some time in executive ession yesterday afternoon, in the consideration of the pending treaty by the terms of which the claim of the Venezuelan Steamship Company against the government of Venezuela for damages, caused by the illegal seizure of their vessels during the revolutionary movement some years ago, is to be settled by arbi-tration. Senator Morgan, in behalf of the committee on foreign affairs, made a long ex-planation of the conditions under which the seizures were made, and told of the long and heretofore futile effort of the Department of State to settle the claim by the usual diplo-

No action was taken in the matter by the Senate. There was also a renewal of the dis-cussion which has been had during the recent executive sessions upon the preparation to acquaint the public with the nature of the charges made against Judge Woods and the proceedings of the Senate while considering the nomination. Finally it was decided that the charge that his son had made the office a nest of corruption and frand was false in every detail and told the President he would be perfectly willing to have the 800 persons examined as to the correctages of the momination was confirmed. The vote was on party lines, Senator Peffer, as stated in THE HEARING POSTPONED.

The hearing before the Columbian exposition committee on Chairman Durborew's bill making additional appropriations for the world's fair, set for Monday, the 21st, has been postponed for a time. A subcommittee of the appropriations committee investigating the world's fair expenditures is going to Chicago on the 24th instant. LAST NIGHT'S HOUSE SESSION. There was a marked increase in the number f members present at last evening's session of the House. The utter uselessness of holding Friday night sessions, unless a quorum could be secured, seemed at last to have been appre-ciated, and although when the House met after the recess there was no quorum present the attendance was far larger than that which has honored any previous night session.

About two dozen bills passed the ordeal of the committee of the whole, but none of them received favorable action from the House and they were placed upon the calendar of unfin-ished business.

A delegation from the convention of postmasters recently held in this city waited upon the Senate committee on post offices and post roads this morning and urged upon the committee the necessity of passing various postal measures to benefit the service throughout the

o More Destitute Immigrants to He Lander at the Request of So Acting Secretary Nettleton has written letter to Col. Weber, commissioner of gration at New York, prohibiting the landing of destitute immigrants at the request of

The letter refers to a practice that had grown up at New York and other ports of peratting destitute immigrants to land upon their furnishing a bond, with sureties, conditioned that they should not, within a given time, become a public charge.

In the course of his letter Mr. Nettle "From this date until you receive different riom this date until you receive different instructions from the Secretary's office you will please regard as your rule of action in every case the language embodied in my letter of the 5th of March, 1892, already quoted in the earlier part of this communication, and which I again quote at this point for emphasis:

"Whenever an immigrant is found, upon in-pection, to be likely to become a public charge, you will not land him because of any written or oral assurances of any person or society, except upon the distinct written au-thorization from the Secretary of the Treas-

"It is proper, however, to observe in reply to passages in your communication of the 6th instant that if the commissioners of immigration at the several ports of arrival are to be allowed discretionary power to land alien immigrants who are likely to become a public charge upon the simple assurance of persons or societies that they shall not, in fact, become a public charge, the door is opened for admitting virtually all of this class who choose to come, and for the effectual nullification of the wholesale statute which has been enacted as a bulwark for the protection of our people, wage earners as well as others. If the local commissioners are to have power to accept the assurances of persons have power to accept the assurances of persons or societies representing one nationality they are bound in fairness to accept similar assurances from persons or societies representing any nationality, and this would practically end

"In conclusion I repeat that whatever lati-tude it might be proper to give to the inter-pretation of the law in the respect referred to will be determined by the Secretary of the Treasury in each case submitted." Death of Prof. Bliesmer. In the death of Prof. Carl A. Bliesmer Way-
